

Background

Global Voices provided interpretation for the initiative Marianne, a government initiative designed to foster intellectual exchange and collaboration between international laureates and influential figures in the realms of journalism, politics, and social influence. Laureates are given unique platforms to engage with journalists, politicians and influential personalities. Through dialogues, workshops and conferences, they contribute their expertise, insights and fresh perspectives to help shape discussions and policies on critical topics. We provided a mix of consecutive and simultaneous interpreters for a dozen of meetings with politicians all the way up to the Ministre de l'Intérieur, and famous reporters. These interpretation projects ensured that the young laureates had support.

Challenge

Dealing with a diverse group of international participants leads to communication challenges.

Discussions on highly sensitive and controversial topics can be emotionally charged and intellectually demanding.

Fast-paced nature of organising events and interactions can be stressful for participants and organisers.

Benefits

- Thanks to our interpreters, they were able to invite some of the most important political and journalism figures to crucial meetings for the initiative Marianne.
- Provided the international laureates with a platform to amplify their expertise and ideas on global, social and political issues.
- Through interactions with journalists, politicians, and influential personalities, they gained increased visibility and the opportunity to shape public discourse and policy decisions.
